- What did I do to prepare for class this week? (5 Points)
 - o For class I read the preparation reading material and completed all the prep work about this week's topic of commitment.
- Summarize this week's scenario. (5 points)
 - o This week's scenario is about a software developer named Philip Walker. The Mercy Health Group wants a piece of software created fast so it can be used no later than within 6 months. With how much they wanted, Philip knew that it was going to take longer than 9 months to complete, but his boss, Ryan, says that they can have it made within six months.
- Where did you put your assignments on GitHub? (5 Points)
 - o All my assignments are on to my GitHub pages website, with each reflection/assignment labeled, so when you click on that assignment, it will open up a pdf of the assignment.
- What topics were studied this week, and what are their definitions? (5 Points)
 - o The main idea for this week was the idea of commitment. The definition of the word commitment is the state or quality of being dedicated to a cause, activity, etc.
- What phase of the projects did you complete? (5 points)
 - o The phase that we go to in our projects was planning out the four projects for the 4 institutional learning objectives. After planning them out, we submitted the project ideas to get an approval.
- What did I learn from the study material? (5 Points)
 - o One of the biggest new things that I learned is that it is ok to say no to your managers/boss. Professionals speak truth, as truth is power, and if you do not share and speak how you truly feel or know something is not going to work or be enough time, then you are not being truthful.
- Why is this week's topic important? (5 Points)
 - o Commitment is really important in our daily life, at work and in just our lives. When we are committed to something, it helps us stick to whatever our goals in life may be, whether we are going through good times as well as going through bad times. If something is important to us, we are committed in keep doing what we are doing.
- How is this week's scenario related to this week's topic? (5 Points)
 - o Philip Walker is a software developer. He is very committed to his job. The Mercy Health Group wants a new piece of software to be developed within 6 months or less. Philip knows that it will be longer than 6 months to get this software made. Philip is committed to his job, and he wants the product to be good quality and not to be rushed. He wants to deliver a great, quality product to the customers buying software from them.

- What did you learn from your work on the project? (5 Points)
 - o I'm starting to really learn how to work as a team and try to be efficient and productive with working. With my group, we all had to pitch in ideas and talk about others' ideas and give feedback on what others had to say and try to come to an agreement on some ideas of projects that we had.
- What actions were you assigned to you in your group meeting? (5 Points)
 - o In our team meetings that we had discussing ideas for projects and what we wanted to do, I was the one that was typing into the document as we discussed. I would type some of the ideas of projects that we had for either of the Institutional Learning Objectives.
- What is the most significant take-a-way you have gained this week from your study? (10 Points)
 - o I think the biggest take-a-way I got from class this week was how having commitment is a good trait to have while working in a team. If we are all committed to the project, or anything really, it will help us be more productive and get the thing we need to get done efficiently and effectively, and we will have a better attitude towards work and the project, and will want to put so much time into polishing it and making the end product of really good quality.
- Why is this week's topic important to teamwork? (20 Points)
 - o Being a committed employee in a team is very important. If someone is committed, then they will bring value to the team. They are dedicated to their work and highly productive and want the result of what they are working on to be of good quality. They can even be leaders and examples to others with how committed they are to their work.
- If this was a religion class, how would you relate this week's topic to the gospel? (20 Points)
 - o If something is important to us, then we are committed to whatever that may be. If the Jesus Christ and Heavenly Father are important to us, then we must be committed to them. We need to show them how committed we are and how important they are to us. To be committed to them, we need to do the things that brings us closer with thee and be an example and disciple of Jesus Christ. We must be committed to them during the good times in our lives, as well as the hard times. If we are committed to them, we will receive blessings in return.
